FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Airlines, smokers and non-smokers welcome a new green air friendly tobacco inhaler.

Hailey, Idaho July 14, 2009 – Smoking has been banned on airlines for over 20 years, yet stress and tension levels associated with flying have increased. SmokeScents, a fire cured tobacco inhaler can now be used on aircraft and other places where smoking is restricted. For the past year, SmokeScents has only been available at select smoke shops, medical clinics and online at <http://www.SmokeScents.com>.

SmokeScents are the size of ChapStick lip balm, and are inhaled through the nose or mouth. They are manufactured in the U.S. from organic green tobacco leaf and essential oils from both the US and Europe and maintain their strength for 3 months or longer.

SmokeScents is registered and trademarked with the USPTO as an Aromatherapy Inhaler for non-medical use and can be used wherever smoking is banned. They are safe to use with any prescription medication, 100% customs compliant and are not under the jurisdiction of the FDA.

Maurice Goulet, SmokeScents CEO, said “We are bringing Fly Air Friendly back to airline travel. SmokeScents will satisfy a smoker’s need for the aroma and flavor of tobacco without infringing on the rights of non-smokers.”

Paul Vernon MD stated that, “Having practiced traditional medicine for over 30 years and recommending SmokeScents to over 200 patients during the last year, I can assure you that SmokeScents work. Unlike electronic cigarettes and other expensive nicotine replacement products, SmokeScents helps smokers relax when they can’t smoke.”
